Message

I am very happy to learn that C-DAC is organizing a National Seminar on "E-Learning and E-Learning Technologies" (ELELTECH INDIA 2005) during 8-9, August – 2005 at Hyderabad.

Technology has allowed us to permeate and dissolve the border lines between learning and action and is giving us new means to enhance our learning everyday – without taking a formal course.

E-Learning is becoming an effective tool to transform the Nations into knowledge economies by enhancing the education and skills of the human resources. By using Internet and the resources built around, e-Learning has the potential to create a new paradigm of learning, which is learner centric .

E-Learning can be an efficient and cost effective tool for fostering human resources development, it can lead to cost savings through better utilization of users's time, efficiencies in personnel recourses in institutions providing education and training.

I am sure that this Seminar would provide a platform to share the knowledge of experts and also to deliberate upon various issues involved in implementation of e-learning, possible solutions in the context of our country such as content creation in local languages, low cost e-learning tools, manner in which IPRs of content could be protected and how securely content could be hosted on servers and offered to the end users.

I wish the Seminar all success.
